Boston, Jan. 29, 1842.

Saturday noon.

Dear George:

I wrote to you yesterday, in relation to sister Mary's case; since which, she has grown worse, and this morning, early, was for some time supposed to be dying. The family hardly think that she will be able to outlive this day. You will therefore hasten to us at the earliest practicable period.

We had a great and glorious meeting, last night, in Faneuil Hall. 3 or 4000 present — very many Irishmen, to hear the Irish Address — every thing went off in the most enthusiastic manner. No opposition from any quarter. I was called to preside. The meeting was addressed by Bradburn, Quincy, Col. Miller, J. C. Fuller, W. Phillips, Remond, Douglas, &c.

In great haste,

Yours, in every tried,

Wm. Lloyd Garrison.
